An attempt at untangling the Austens of Yalding, Goudhurst and Horsmonden

A number of works on Jane Austen trace her family back to John Austen of Horsmonden (died 1620). Several attempts have been made to take this line further back, most notably by Sir Anthony Wagner. His conclusions were outlined in 1940 in a small book entitled Pedigree of Austen, of Horsmonden, Broadford, Grovehurst, Kippington, Capel Manor, etc.<sup>1</sup> by Richard Arthur Austen-Leigh, with an explanation of his reasoning which is quoted below. In this document, John Austen's father is posited as the Robert Austen who was buried in Horsmonden in 1603. This has never quite hung together to me, for reasons outlined below, and the fact that the baptism of an unnamed baby cannot be taken as proof.

Quite by chance, I unearthed a will which, I am convinced, proves definitively that John Austen of Horsmonden (John I) was not the son of Robert but of Thomas Austen of Goudhurst and an unknown wife, who baptised a number of their children in that parish, but clearly married and began their family before the commencement of the Goudhurst register in 1558. Before I explain my reasoning, though, it is worth quoting Wagner's arguments from Austen-Leigh's book:

"Jane Austen's ancestry has not hitherto been proved beyond her great-great-great-great-grandfather (Berry's Kentish Genealogies, 1830 p 127), John Austen of Horsmonden, who was buried there 5 March 1620. A brass shield of Arms, Three roundels on a chevron between three lions' gambes erased, remains on the tomb of his wife Joan, buried there 16 Dec, 1604 (Hasted History of Kent 1782, vol II p. 387). This coat, with tinctures as above, was allowed at the 1574 Visitation of Kent to James Astyn of Chevening, and Stephen Astyn (or Austen) of Yalding, the next parish to Horsmonden. Austen is a common name in Kent and similar Arms are recorded for three families of the name. The use of this particular Coat by John, so near in place and time to the Visitation family, decidedly suggests relationship. Such other evidence as I have found tends to confirm this. John Awsten of Horsmonden, in a deposition made at Canterbury (Register of Depositions, vol 14, p.80) made in 1591/2 states that he was then aged 32 and was born at Goudhurst. The Horsmonden register shows no John Austen other than Jane's ancestor to whom this deposition could belong. The Goudhurst Register shows only one entry that will fit John's date of birth as stated above – the baptism, namely, of an unnamed son of Robert Austen 26 April 1560. A consecutive series of his children's baptisms shows that this Robert was of Horsmonden, where he was buried in 1603, and that among them was a son Stephen, baptised at Goudhurst in 1561. Now the Visitation pedigree shows that Stephen Austen of Yalding had a son Robert by his second marriage to Dorothy Peckham, and I conjecture that this Robert is identical with the father of John of Horsmonden. The dates fit, for Margaret, Stephen's first wife, was living in 1522 when his father, William Astyn of Yalding, made his will P.C.C. 25 Maynwairyng), and his second marriage to Dorothy Peckham must have taken place not long after, for by 1574 James of Chevening, a son of this marriage, was himself married and had issue. The occurrence of Stephen as the name of Robert's son supports the identification."

Wagner's language is guarded; he uses words like 'conjecture', 'suggests', 'tends to confirm' but this proposed line of descent now appears regularly without any caveats. However, Heralds' Visitations were not fool-proof, and it is likely that much money changed hands as the upwardly mobile jockeyed for the cachet of a coat of arms. Leigh-Austen's account makes much of the appearance of the names Stephen and Benjamin in the Horsmonden family. Both these names feature in the family which I believe John I came from. While Wagner was undoubtedly the foremost genealogist of his day, eighty years later the internet has made finding original source documents and making contact with other researchers considerably easier, allowing amateurs like me to find documents which probably eluded him. Seven years ago, I synthesised of every scrap of evidence I could lay hands on, and although I was not able to reach a definitive conclusion, enough anomalies were then unearthed to raise doubts about parts of the evidence for the Yalding connection. In the light of more recent discoveries, I now have to rewrite a large part of my account, though I am leaving in much that I discovered about Austen families who may or may not have been connected, albeit tenuously to John I Austen.

John Austen of the parish of Horsmonden in the diocese of Rochester where he has lived for seven years, before that in the parish of Goudhurst for all of his life, aged 32.

As John I and his wife Joan Berry's first child was baptised at Horsmonden in 1585, this would dovetail nicely with a move from Goudhurst to Horsmonden at the time of his marriage (at Lydd) in 1584. When trying to fit a baptism in 1560 with the age given in the deposition, I argued originally that he had counted his 32nd year, rather than his age. However, an actual age of 32 would mean a birth in 1558 – 9. The Goudhurst register doesn't start until late in 1558, which could explain the lack of a baptismal record for John. Also, it was only in 1597 that Elizabeth I ruled that parish registers should be kept in parchment books and it was at that date that earlier entries on paper were copied up into the volumes we have now. As Terrick Fitzhugh<sup>3</sup> succinctly points out:

In the transcription, errors naturally crept in.

In addition, absence of evidence is not evidence of absence. John I is definitely not the only person missing from baptismal registers.

Only his father's will proves John I's parentage by naming key people from the Canterbury deposition<sup>4</sup>. This deals with a visit made by John Austen and Soloman Were to Linton (just south of Maidstone and next door to Loose) to the house of Thomas Nixson senior, who was on his deathbed. The purpose was to persuade him to make a deed of gift to his son, Thomas Nixson junior, who was about to make a marriage contract with a sister of John. A transcript of this document accompanies this article, along with the will.

It does not help that although the will in question is correctly indexed on the National Archives catalogue for the year 1602, it appears on Ancestry as that of Thomas Ansten of Wadhurst. However, on reading the text two bequests leap out:

Item I will and bequeath unto Salomon Weare the son of Thomas Weare and Elizabeth my daughter late deceased the sum of £10 and

Item I will and bequeath to Thomas Nixson the son of my daughter Elizabeth late deceased the sum of 10 shillings.

There is no way the conjunction of the names Soloman Weare, Thomas Nixson and John Austen, who also appears in the will, could be a coincidence. The text makes it clear that Thomas Austen's daughter Elizabeth had firstly married Thomas Weare, and borne two children - Soloman and Margaret - been widowed, then married Thomas Nixson and borne him a son of the same name. It looked as if, in 1591, John Austen I had taken his young nephew Soloman (or possibly a paternal uncle with the same name) on a visit to the elder Thomas Nixson to ensure that when his sister remarried she would be well provided for. As if this wasn't conclusive enough, Thomas Austen's surviving children were named in the will as Thomas, John, Richard, Robert, Francis and Benjamin. John I named six of his sons John, Benjamin, Robert, Francis, Thomas and Richard. There were also Jeffery - named for John's father-in-law - and Peter; otherwise the names are identical, with his father and all his uncles remembered.

This places another generation onto John I's tree with certainty.

The Descendants of Unknown Austen

1. Thomas Austen Parentage unverified, but names a nephew Stephen son of brother Stephen in his will<sup>5</sup>, dated 24.8.1601. Married an unknown wife around 1553, which suggests a birth date between 1520 and 1530. Several children baptised at Goudhurst after the register begins in 1558. One child buried there. Two mentioned in will whose births presumably pre-date the register. His first wife, and mother of his children, appears to have been buried at Goudhurst on 14th January 1588 as the 'wyf of Thomas' Austen. Signs Goudhurst register as churchwarden along with Laurence Shavel (?Sharpe) yearly from 1559-63, then 1565 and 67. Thereafter, biennially from 1570-6, 1577, and regularly every two years from 1580-1598. (Next churchwardens' signatures - Mathewe Road and Mathewe Browne - occur in 1601.) This suggests either a very late move to Wadhurst, or continuing activity in Goudhurst after the move. Land tenure in the Weald often consisted of scattered small parcels of land in several parishes.

Married his second wife, Margaret Courthope, on 28th September 1590, at Cranbrook. There is nothing in the register to say whether she also was a widow. Either way, she seems to have had connections to a family which was both a major landowner in the area and a wealthy clothier dynasty. The main seat of the Courthopes was at Whileigh, in Wadhurst, so it is feasible that it was this second marriage which made Thomas move ultimately to Wadhurst. Appears on a schedule of leases<sup>6</sup> at Wadhurst with date 24.12.1597. May have served as Guardian<sup>7</sup> for Goudhurst with Laurence Sharpe in 1600. Will refers to Thomas Austen of Wadhurst, yeoman, and requests burial at either Wadhurst or Goudhurst; makes bequests to his wife and eight children, as well as his daughter Elizabeth's three children. Many of his sons are married, as bequests were left to the children of sons John, Richard and Robert, and the 'six' children of son Thomas. Leaves some sizeable cash bequests - e.g. £200 to daughter Marie, as well as smaller ones - e.g. £10 to son John. Mentions 'the mansion house of my son Robert' where items of value are 'locked up', and leaves a number of houses and land in Wadhurst to his son Thomas - presumably the eldest - with the proviso that either the profits go to wife Margaret for life or he pay her a £20 annuity as set out in her jointure. Maybe these were properties she brought to the marriage. Also mentions items of silver. Clearly a wealthy man. Will witnessed by the vicar of Goudhurst.

Probably identifiable as the Thomas Austen of Goudhurst Clothier who purchased a house and land at Courtesden in Goudhurst in June 1584<sup>8</sup>. There is no reference to this land in his will, but it does seem to have been later owned by Thomas<sup>2</sup> Austen, his eldest son (see below). The Goudhurst register shows no one else who could have been referred to (as this man is) as Thomas Austen senior; Thomas<sup>2</sup>'s son Thomas was not yet born. (See below for further information on Courtesden and reasons for presuming this to be the same family.) Buried at Goudhurst 6.10.1601 as 'of the parish of Wadhurst, householder', i.e. head of household.

After his death, Thomas' wife Margaret married John Moore on 4.6.1604 at Pembury. Mentioned as 'my mother-in-law' Margaret Moore in her step-son Thomas<sup>2</sup>'s will of 1605. Still alive when John Moore made his will in 1613.

- I. Thomas<sup>2</sup> Austen Presumed to be the eldest child by virtue of the fact that his birth seems to predate the register. Probably born around 1554 at Goudhurst. Father's will mentions six of Thomas' children alive in 1601 (baptisms show Thomas<sup>2</sup> to have had six living children in 1601). Overseer of father's will – paid 10/- for his pains. Bequeathed all father's property in Wadhurst, provided he pay mother (i.e. step-mother in this instance, as his own will makes reference to her as 'mother-in-law') profits from property or an annuity. Probably witnessed the assignment of a lease<sup>9</sup> on Chingley Furnace Goudhurst along with brothers Francis and Robert in 1597. Will 1605<sup>10</sup> as Thomas Austen of Goudhurst, clothier. Will names seven children: Thomas, John, Jeffery, Joan, Margaret, Ann/Agnes and Alice. (Those living when Thomas<sup>1</sup> made his will are underlined.) Leaves all houses, lands and tenements in Wadhurst to sons John and Jeffery, and dwelling house in Goudhurst to son Thomas, who is also charged with paying £100 to each of the daughters at 21 years. Receipts of their legacies refer to him as 'late of Courtesden'. Died between 10.12.1605 and 25.4.1606. Given the number of other marriages in this family which seem to be inter-family it is likely that a marriage between Thomas Austen and Alice Beree at Lydd on 15.5.1585 is this Thomas, marrying the sister of his brother John's new wife, Joan Berry (who had married at Lydd the year before). Thomas<sup>2</sup>'s first child was baptised a year later. It would also explain the naming of his son Jeffery, as Joan was the daughter of Jeffery Berry.

- 1) Thomas<sup>3</sup> Austen Baptised at Horsmonden 1586. Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Bequeathed house in Goudhurst (presumably Courtesden) by father. Paid out legacies to his sisters between 1619 and 23. Presumably struggled to maintain own inheritance: mortgage taken out on Courtesden in 1622<sup>11</sup> and this was foreclosed in 1631<sup>12</sup> following his dispossession on 12th April 1628<sup>13</sup>. His financial difficulties may explain delays in paying his sisters' legacies.
- 2) Joan Austen Baptised at Horsmonden 1588. Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Receipt for legacy signed by husband John Bayley of Goudhurst, clothier, and refers to father as 'Thomas Austen...of Courtesden...clothier...deceased'. Receipt dated 1611.
- 3) Margaret Austen Baptised at Horsmonden 1590. Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Receipt of legacy in 1619, some years after reaching her majority. Marriage to Nicholas Cleyton 6.5.1608, Mayfield, Sussex, by licence which states Margaret to be of Goudhurst and Nicholas of Little Horsted. Nicholas was baptised at Mayfield in 1584, son of John Cleyton. He was therefore brought up by another Austen widow - of whom more later - who married the widowed John Claiton at Mayfield on 16.2.1589.
- 4) John Austen Baptised at Horsmonden 1592. Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Received property in Wadhurst under his father's will.
- 5) Richard Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 1594. Buried there 1595, so not one of the 'six' children of Thomas mentioned Thomas<sup>2</sup>'s will.
- 6) Ann/Agnes Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 1598. Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Married Nathaniel Foster of Cranbrook, mercer. Receipt dated 1621.
- 7) Alice Austen Willed 10/- by grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Unmarried at the time of the receipt of legacy from her father in 1623; born around 1602. Baptised at Goudhurst in June 1601, 2 months before Thomas Austen of Wadhurst made his will.
- 8) Jeffery Austen Baptism at Goudhurst in 1603, after death of grandfather Thomas Austen of Wadhurst. Named possibly after his presumed cousin of Horsmonden, or if Alice Berrie was his mother, after his maternal grandfather. Received property in Wadhurst under his father's will. It has been pointed out to me by another Austen researcher that the Elizabeth Austen, widow of Jeffery, who wrote a will<sup>14</sup> could equally, or even more likely, have been the wife of Jeffery son of Thomas rather than his cousin Jeffery son of John (see p. 11), and that although she left bequests to Apesley relatives, this was not necessarily her maiden name. It would make more sense for this Jeffery to have fathered children John and Mary, both probably born in the 1620s.

- II. Jane Austen Born around 1556 at Goudhurst. Buried at Goudhurst as 'Janne daughter of Thomas' on 28th August 1560.
- III. John Austen I Born around 1558/9 at Goudhurst, as sworn in deposition regarding Soloman Were and Thomas Nixson, but before the register was established. This would make him 32 or 33 in 1591. Lived from the age of around 26 in Horsmonden as sworn. Willed £10 by his father. His children – unnamed – given 10/- each. Six of them would have been alive at this time. In 1592, Thomas Hampden took out a bond<sup>15</sup> for £500 with John Austen of Horsmonden, clothier. There is only one John Austen assessed on the Lay Subsidy<sup>16</sup> at Horsmonden in 1597/8 (at £4 10/8 on his goods); it seems likely that this is John I.

Another John Austen, clothier, makes an appearance in Horsmonden records in a will<sup>17</sup> dated 1615, naming wife Margaret, son Thomas and daughters Jane and Margaret, so the bond and lay subsidy could refer to him. Thomas and Jane's baptisms took place at Horsmonden in 1606 and 1608 respectively and Margaret daughter of John and Margaret was baptised there in 1614. John (d. 1615) names wife Margaret and children Thomas, Jane and Margaret in his will and makes reference to property in Staplehurst. I have not been able to fit him into this branch of the Austen clan, though being a clothier, he may well have been connected.

Later documentation makes it clear that John I's son Francis owned the house known as Broadford in Horsmonden, but the 1602 Quarter Sessions<sup>18</sup> seem to place John there a generation earlier. "A core or bancke" lying near a common bridge called Brodford Bridge in Goudhurst is a nuisance because it is damaging "an Arch" of the bridge. John Austen of Horsmonden has allowed the bank to remain for a long time. John apparently rectified the damage. He is described as a yeoman, and recorded as paying a fine of 6d. Broadford Bridge is not marked on modern O.S. maps, but is described by Francis Austen of Capel Manor in a series of letters<sup>19</sup> dated 1872, as being 300 yards away from Stone Bridge, on a smaller mill stream. There was apparently a fulling mill at Broadford<sup>20</sup>, whether at the time of John I or not is not known. Broadford Bridge shows on the 1876 O.S. map as even closer to Broadford manor house than is Stone Bridge. The almost inescapable conclusion is that John was living at Broadford in the early 1600s, though he may not have owned it outright. This property may be what is referred to in his will<sup>21</sup> as 'the lease that I have taken of certain lands from Sir Henry Whetnall knight deceased.' (However, given the apparent connection between this land and Grovehurst in John II's will<sup>22</sup> - see below - it's more likely the comment referred to Grovehurst.) The River Teise, the river fed by the mill stream, serves as the boundary between Horsmonden and Goudhurst, which further strengthens the idea of this family having a foot in both parishes. John made another appearance in the Quarter Session records<sup>23</sup>, in 1600, when he was accused of having ploughed up a section of highway. John Austen I married Joan Berry on 14.9.1584 at Lydd. She is described on her monumental brass as daughter of Jeffery Berry, 'sometime of the parish of Midley'. I suspect this is where Joan was baptised, but no records survive. There are members of the Berry family recorded at Lydd, but Joan's baptism does not appear in the parish register. Joan's memorial, recording her death in childbirth on 9.11.1604 aged 36, names her husband and children, all of whom survived infancy. John was buried on 5.3.1620 as John Austen senior. His will<sup>24</sup> divides his money between all his sons, but leaves the land - whether in Kent or Sussex - to his eldest son, John, with a proviso that his grandson John Perryn, son of his daughter Joan, receive an annuity of £5. One of the witnesses to the will is Audrey Perrin, step-mother to his son-in-law John Perryn.

children (not named); brother Peter and his children; sister Perryn's children John, Joan, Elizabeth, Mary, Susan and Alice; brother Robert deceased, and his children John, Jeffrey, Ann and Joan; brother Francis – his principle heir; brother Thomas; brother Jeffery (deceased) and his son John; Elizabeth Austen, widow of his uncle Benjamin, and their sons, Peter and Benjamin. Also mentions kinsman Daniel Brattle and friends John Horsmonden and John Stringer. A clause reserves 'timber trees growing upon the lease land which I hold from Thomas Whetenhall' for repairs on Grovehurst, so it may be this property that John I was referring to in his will. Mentions property in Yalding – no indication whether bought or inherited.

- 2) Jeffery Austen baptised 19.3.1588 at Horsmonden, possibly buried 19.3.1636 at Horsmonden. May have married Elizabeth, whose will<sup>26</sup> named her deceased husband Jeffery Austen, her children John and Mary, various Apesley relations including a sister, and a paternal uncle to her daughter named John. She was buried 1.10.1638 at Horsmonden. (See also Jeffery Austen p. 9.) A number of the family died during this period: Jeffery and his wife, Benjamin, Peter; Robert wrote his will, although he didn't die until some years later. An outbreak of plague around this time may account for the high mortality rate.

children John, Mary, Joan, Benjamin, Jeffery and William, all minors. Refers to 'loving cousin' John Horsmonden, and loving brother George Besbech. Presumably the latter is a brother-in-law – maybe husband to a sister of Suzanne - but the term cousin for John Horsmonden is curious. This is a loose term and could be used for a range of relationships, some of them quite tenuous. In his will<sup>28</sup> dated 1635/6 John Horsmonden makes reference to his father-in-law William Austen, but John married Margaret Austen in 1595. If he and Benjamin were first cousins, this would make William John I's brother, but although there is a William son of Thomas baptised in 1561, he would have had to marry and father a family as a child to fit the facts – unless he was born before the register was begun, and baptised as a child for some reason. The will<sup>29</sup> of John Horsmonden's father-in-law, William Austen, dated 1616, shows him to have sired daughters: Elizabeth married Anthony Fowle; Margaret married John Horsmonden; Ann married John Taylor; Judith married John Reynolds; Mary married Thomas Huckaby. He does mention some male relatives, a brother Richard and his three sons: John William and Robert – but no Thomas or Stephen.

His will<sup>30</sup>, written in 1638 and proved in 1645, calls him a clothier of Brenchley, names wife Elizabeth – née Burlet, whom he married in June 1638. His first wife, married in 1627, was Susanna Kely - the will also makes reference to his brother Edward Keyley. Three children named. Presumably, a fourth child – Joan, named by her uncle John in his will - was born between the writing of the will in 1638 and its proving in 1645.

According to Hasted<sup>31</sup> it was Francis who originally acquired the manors of Grovehurst, Hoathe, Smeeth and Capel during the reign of James I [1603-25]. Given that Francis was born in 1600, with four older brothers, and the fact that John II speaks of timber on land leased from Henry Whetnall being reserved for use on Grovehurst, it seems unlikely that he bought these estates before he was 25, and that his brother John ignored the fact in his will. Maybe the estates were leased to the family in James' I's reign, and finally bought outright by Francis sometime after 1650. Francis and his wife Ellen baptised most of their children at Goudhurst.

2. Peter Austen baptised 1635 Horsmonden
3. Thomas Austen baptised 1637 Horsmonden

These dates would fit nicely with what looks like a nuncupative will<sup>32</sup> of 1638, spoken in the presence of John Austen and Elizabeth Austen in which Peter leaves everything to his wife to bring up the children. It is not clear whether the date - 5.5.1638 - is a date of death or the date of the will.

- 8) Richard Austen baptised 9.12.1604 Horsmonden. Married Ann Keyley at Rochester on 15th March 1638, with residence given as Horsmonden. Five children were baptised to Richard and Ann Austen in the 1630s and 40s, and were mentioned collectively in John II's will.

Children of Richard and Ann Austen:

1. Elizabeth Austen baptised 1638 Horsmonden
2. James Austen baptised 1639 Horsmonden
3. Joane Austen baptised 1641 Horsmonden
4. John Austen baptised 1642 Horsmonden
5. Richard Austen baptised 1646 Goudhurst

- 9) Thomas Austen baptised 9.12.1604 Horsmonden. Although John II names his brother Thomas in his will<sup>33</sup>, he makes no reference to any children. The only other set of nieces and nephews not named are Francis' children, but he was the principle heir, so would have been well provided for. Thomas receives an annuity, so John may have felt this was enough. It is possible therefore that the children listed below belong to another Thomas Austen, maybe the Courtesden family.

Possible children of Thomas Austen:

1. John Austen baptised 1636 Goudhurst
2. Thomas Austen baptised 1638 Goudhurst
3. Mary Austen baptised 1640 Goudhurst

4. John Austen baptised 1641 Goudhurst

IV. Wylliam Austen Baptised at Goudhurst on 21.9.1561. This baptism predates that of his brother Richard by only 5 months, which casts some doubt, especially as not mentioned in Thomas' will. Thomas Austen signed register as churchwarden, and would presumably have noted errors regarding his own children. Is this the sole child of another Thomas? A late baptism? Not mentioned in Thomas' will, so either died before 1601, or eldest child and therefore maybe already inherited his portion - or unconnected. The will of William Austen 1616 does mention a brother Richard.

V. Richard Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 9.2.1561. In father's will bequeathed all his father's 'household stuff and furniture for his working house' which is already in his possession. Children bequeathed 10/- apiece. Does the term working house suggest that he too was a clothier? Possibly identifiable with Richard Austen of Hawkhurst; will proved 1610 naming wife Margaret, sons Thomas, Richard and David and daughters Marie, Frances and Sarah. Another possibility is Richard Austen of Marden householder buried at Goudhurst 23.5.1611. No further trace found.

VI. Robert Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 24.3.1561. Described in father's will as having a 'mansion house'. Bequeathed the residue of his father's estate and appointed executor. Children bequeathed 10/- apiece. Probably witnessed the assignment of a lease<sup>34</sup> on Chingley Furnace Goudhurst along with brothers Thomas and Francis in 1597. Described as Robert Austen of Goudhurst clothier<sup>35</sup> in a Quarter Sessions Record of 1599 in which bound to keep the peace towards Joseph Willard of Horsmonden. Acted as surety to Benjamin Austen weaver of Horsmonden in the same case. Some confusion as there is also a Robert Austen broadweaver of Horsmonden, but it is unlikely that a broadweaver's house would be described as a 'mansion'.

VII. Elizabeth Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 13.8.1567. Married Thomas Weare and the Thomas Nixson. Died before 1601.

Children of Thomas Weare and Elizabeth:

1. Saloman Weare Willed £10 by grandfather Thomas of Wadhurst
2. Margaret Weare Willed £10 by grandfather Thomas of Wadhurst

Children of Thomas Nixson and Elizabeth:

Willed £100 and a third share of all linen and pewter 'locked up' at Robert's house and a third share of one dozen of silver spoons, one silver salt and one pot covered with silver. Probably witnessed the assignment of a lease<sup>36</sup> on Chingley Furnace Goudhurst along with brothers Thomas and Robert in 1597. No further trace found,
- IX. Benjamin Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 21.12.1572. Willed a third share of all linen and pewter 'locked up' at Robert's house and a third share of one dozen of silver spoons, one silver salt and one pot covered with silver. Potential for confusion with Benjamin Austen weaver of Horsmonden but this is almost certainly Benjamin son of Robert and Elizabeth, baptised at Horsmonden on 28.2.1572. Died before 1650. John II Austen willed Benjamin's widow Elizabeth £5 and their sons Peter and Benjamin £20.
Children of Benjamin and Elizabeth:
1. Peter Austen
  2. Benjamin Austen
- X. Marie Austen Baptised at Goudhurst 21.8.1575. Willed £200 a third share of all linen and pewter 'locked up' at Robert's house and a third share of one dozen of silver spoons, one silver salt and one pot covered with silver. No further trace found.

2. Stephen Austen of Goudhurst and Mayfield.

I initially counted Stephen Austen of Goudhurst and Mayfield out of the equation as I could see no link between the Stephen who wrote a will at Mayfield and the Stephen named in Thomas<sup>2</sup> Austen's will, but have re-appraised in light of new evidence.

Stephen Austen married Joan Holmud at Goudhurst in 1560. Baptisms there of daughters only.

Children of Stephen Austen and Joan Holmud:

- 1) Judith Austen baptised Goudhurst 1561; died young
- 2) Joan Austen baptised Goudhurst 1562.
- 3) Susan Austen baptised Goudhurst 1564. Bequeathed £10 by her father's will. Wagner has her married to William Walter at Goudhurst in 1590. However, it seems much more likely that she married Nicholas Garrat at Mayfield on 16.2.1589, the same day that her widowed step-mother married John Claiton there. Nicholas buried at Mayfield in 1610.

- 4) Judith Austen baptised Goudhurst 1566. Wagner has her married at Goudhurst to John Reynolds in 1590. However, the will of William Austen<sup>37</sup> clothier of Goudhurst in 1616 leaves a bequest to a daughter Judith Reynolds, showing the Judith who married John Reynolds to have been his child. There is a marriage at Horsmonden in 1588 between a Judith Austen and William Perrine; I suspect this may be Stephen's daughter. This William was uncle to the John Perrin who married John I's daughter Joan, meaning there would have been kinship links on both sides of the family.
- 5) Patience Austen baptised Goudhurst 1569. Possibly married John Garrette in 1594 at Horsmonden. It seems feasible that this man may have been Nicholas Garrat's brother, though there is no proof.

Joan Austen née Holmud buried at Goudhurst in 1574.

Stephen Austen married Joan Philpot at Goudhurst in 1576. No children recorded there.

Children of Stephen Austen and Joan Philpot:

- 6) Stephen Austen baptised at Mayfield 1579. Possibly married Marie Usborne at Goudhurst in 1603. A will, dated 1635 and proved in 1639 states him to be a clothier of Goudhurst. Bequests to wife Mary, sons Robert, Thomas and Stephen, daughters Mary Baylie, Elizabeth Smith, Anne, Alice, Mary and Martha. This looks like the will of Stephen, son of brother Stephen, named in Thomas<sup>2</sup> Austen's will. However, there was also a Stephen Austen, son of Robert, baptised at Horsmonden in 1561 so the will, and spouse, may belong to him. A final twist is that the will mentions a property in Yalding. There is a 'sentence' the following year in which the older children are in dispute with Stephen's widow and executrix. In this document, Stephen is referred to as 'late of Yalding' (written Yadling).
- 7) Marie baptised at Mayfield 1581. No further record found.
- 8) Thomas baptised at Mayfield 1584. No further record found.
- 9) Margaret baptised and buried at Mayfield 1585.

Stephen Austen buried at Mayfield 20.1.1588. His will, stated him to be of Mayfield.

Bequest to daughter Susan – looks like a marriage portion. To be paid within 2 months.

Bequest to wife Joan, with injunction to use it to raise the younger children. Proviso that if she remarries, specific sums of money are to go to Stephen, Thomas and Marie, and another sum to be divided equally between the children of his first wife. The fact that one of his overseers is names Thomas Filpot supports the theory that this man's wife was Joan Philpot.

Joan Austen née Philpot married John Claiton at Mayfield on 16.2.1589 - at the same church, same day as Margaret Austen, daughter of Stephen's cousin, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, married John Claiton's son Nicholas, another clothier, as I suspect his father was. The number and extent of cross-overs between the persons discussed in the above account lead me to believe that this is a family unit which dovetails together to the point of being proof positive.

The Astyns of Yalding

If seems now to be indisputable that Thomas Austen of Wadhurst and Stephen Austen of Mayfield both had strong links to Goudhurst, and were brothers. Where they and their antecedents originated is still open to question. Anthony Wagner was convinced that John I Austen – Thomas of Wadhurst's son and Stephen of Mayfield's nephew came from an Austen family in Yalding who had the right to bear arms identical to those on the Austen memorials in Horsmonden church. The fact that John I has been proven to have a father named Thomas and an uncle named Stephen seems to strengthen the case for the Yalding connection as the Stephen Astyn who was allowed:

This coat, with tinctures as above, ... at the 1574 Visitation of Kent had, as will be demonstrated, sons named both Stephen and Thomas. However, an examination of the evidence available for this family shows little other firm reason to suppose that John I was their descendant.

William Astyn of Yalding Probably born around 1460. May have married twice. A plea of covenant<sup>38</sup> dated 1484 names William Astyn, wife Joan and land in Yalding. William's will, proved in 1522<sup>39</sup>, places emphasis on the rights of youngest son John, a minor, and his mother, his current wife Elizabeth, whereas his older sons are clearly mature. The will gives the following: Body to be buried before the high cross in the church at Yalding. Pious offerings to churches at Brechessle [Brenchley], Benenden and Yalding. A tabernacle to be made to the image of St. Peter at Yalding according to a bargain made with Thomas Thorngate of Goutherst [Goudhurst]. Land in Yalding, Loose, Sandhurst and Benenden, as well as land in Boxley which had belonged to his wife Elizabeth. Will names her; brothers John and Thomas Astyn; son Stephen and wife Margaret, sons Nicholas and John, daughter Agnes with husband John Wyllarde; grandsons, both named William, sons of Stephen and Nicholas respectively. Land in Boxley to go to John but to revert to Elizabeth if he dies before 21. The 1574 Visitation of Kent<sup>40</sup> names William, his son Stephen with an unnamed wife (presumably Margaret), second wife Dorothy Peckham and children from both marriages. No reference to grandchildren per se in will, though reference to two godchildren, who are sons of two of his sons. Another generic reference made to god-children un-named. Is this word being used here for grandchildren? Ten years later, when son Nicholas makes his will, it is clear that many of William's grandchildren must have been alive in 1522.

- I. Agnes Astyn married John Wyllarde before 1522, more likely around 1500-10. Both named in William Astyn's will. Brother Nicholas' will of 1532 names her, her husband and children: John, Richard, Elizabeth, Clement (already married), Julian, Anne, Margaret, William, George and Dorothy. No further record found.
- II. John Astyn Willed land in Yalding, Loose, Sandhurst and Benenden by his father. A minor in 1522. Sold land in Benenden and Sandhurst to brother Nicholas before 1532. A will was proved at Rochester<sup>41</sup> for a John Austen of Yalding in 1533. Wife Elizabeth named, son Laurence and brother-in-law William ?Whichman. However, no reference to the rest of this Austen clan, and Laurence doesn't appear as a name anywhere else in the Yalding family. Different family? No further record found.
- III. Nicholas Astyn Described as of East Farleigh (a small parish between Yalding and Loose) in will<sup>42</sup> proved 1532. Names deceased wives Joan and Alice; children William, Nicholas, John, Joan (wife of Guy Maylenn), Margery and Margaret; brother Stephen and Stephen's sons Thomas, William, John and Stephen. His cousin Thomas Austyn (not son as I previously stated), and a godson Nicholas, son of this cousin are also named. (In my previous account, I wrongly assumed Nicholas junior to have been the older, testator Nicholas' nephew Thomas' son, which would have necessitated Thomas' birth a generation earlier, around 1510.) Nicholas' brother Stephen and his cousin Thomas Astyn executors. Abodes not given. Pious offerings to churches at East Farleigh, Loose, Linton, Marden, Halton, Yalding. Lands bequeathed in all of the above except Marden, and also Leigh and Sandhurst. Reference to acquiring land in East Farleigh and Linton from William Prebell, father of wife Alice. References also to broad yards of cloth brought from London by brother John, suggesting a possible link to the cloth trade.

IV. Stephen Astyn of Yalding. Named in wills of father (which leaves him land in Yalding) and brother Nicholas. No reference to abode other than Yalding. Wife Margaret named in William Astyn's will of 1522 and children William, John, Stephen and Thomas named in Nicholas' will of 1532. Appears on the 1574 Visitation of Kent as Stephen Astyn of Yalding, father of James Astyne of Chevening - the grantee - and son of William Astyn of Yalding. Wife named in this document as Dorothy Peckham, and children from this marriage listed as James, Robert, John, Margaret, Mary, Susan and Anne. No dates or places, apart from Chevening and Yalding, and no reference to children by wife Margaret, as attested by other family wills. No extant will, but a number of records place him in Yalding, namely: a pleading in the Court of Requests<sup>44</sup> which, while undated, is placed between 1492 and 1547 by the chancellor's name at the top of the document, and mentions only Yalding; two chancery proceedings<sup>45</sup>, one - dated 1538-44 - also deals with a dispute over land in Yalding; and another -dated 1544-51 - in which Stephen is accused of conveying a house in Yalding belonging to someone else. A chancery pleading<sup>46</sup> dated 1570 shows Ann Austen née Gate, widow of William Austen - late of Farley and son of Stephen Austen deceased - contending her right to land in Yalding, which Stephen had been seised of about 26 years before. This land had passed to William, and an annuity on it was granted to Anne for life at marriage. During the same period, another chancery document<sup>47</sup> dated between 1533-8 shows a Stephen Austen (feoffee to uses of two messuages and 127 acres of land in Marden and Horsmonden) in dispute with John Roberts of Brenchley. A Writ of Sicut<sup>48</sup> dated 1526, summoned a Stephen Austen of Goudhurst to be on a jury at Westminster. Nothing suggests these are references to Stephen of Yalding. The will of Dionise Austen dated 1536<sup>49</sup>, which identifies her as widow of a Stephen Austen of Goudhurst, is presumably the will of a relatively young woman, as the only people mentioned are her father and her father-in-law William Austen. Clearly this can't be William of Yalding, as he had died fourteen years previously, so there are obviously at least two, maybe more, Stephen Austens being documented.

Children of Stephen Astyn of Yalding by Margaret:

- 1) William Austen Described in the 1570 chancery proceeding<sup>50</sup> as of Farley and son of Stephen Austen deceased. Mentioned in wills of grandfather William and Uncle Nicholas. Appears as Stephen's son on 1574 Visitation. Born before 1522; died around 1569. Married Anne Gate. No known children. No further record.
- 2) John Austen Named in Uncle Nicholas' will in 1532. Appears on 1574 Visitation. No further record.
- 3) Stephen Austen Mentioned in Uncle Nicholas' will in 1532. Appears on 1574 Visitation. This Stephen is the most likely candidate to be the one named by Hasted<sup>51</sup>: 'In the 33d year of King Henry VIII [c1542] the lessee of this manor [Loose] was Stephen Astyn, who was succeeded in the 30th year of Queen Elizabeth [c1588] by John Smythe'. His cousin Nicholas Austyn of Loose names him as overseer, and states that he too is 'of Loose'. Given that this will<sup>52</sup> places Stephen in Loose in 1564, it seems increasingly unlikely that this is the Stephen married to Joan Holmud in Goudhurst in 1560 and baptizing children there throughout the 1560s as Wagner suggests. To cite Wagner and Leigh-Austen again, the coat of arms was allowed to James Austen of Chevening and Stephen Astyn or Austen of Yalding, not Goudhurst, in 1574.

4) Thomas Austen Named in Uncle Nicholas' will in 1532. Appears on 1574 Visitation. No further proven record.

Children of Stephen Astyn of Yalding and Dorothy Peckham:

5) James Austyne Entered pedigree at the Visitation of Kent 1574, naming father as Stephen of Yalding and grandfather as William Astyn of Yalding. Listed his mother as Dorothy daughter of James Peckham. Described himself as of Chevening and listed his siblings and half-siblings. Married Allice, daughter of Sir Henry Isley. Visitation notes arms as follows: Argent, on a chevron between three lions' gambes erased and erect sable, as many bezants, which is the same as the arms on the Austen tombs at Horsmonden. It is this which made Anthony Wagner infer that the Horsmonden family probably descended from that of Yalding. Chevening is some distance away from Yalding, and is not mentioned by any other documents to do with the Yalding family. This maybe suggests that Dorothy Peckham's family held land in the area, or perhaps James purchased lands here.

i. Margaret Austen Streatfield<sup>53</sup> has her married to Richard Brown esq. of Shingleton in Great Chart, but he has not proved a reliable source in many instances. No further record.

6) Ann Austen Appears on the 1574 Visitation. No further record.

7) Margaret Austen Appears on the 1574 Visitation, but with a circle round her name and not connected by a line to the pedigree. No further record.

8) Mary Austen Appears on the 1574 Visitation. No further record.

9) Susan Austen Appears on the 1574 Visitation. No further record.

10) Robert Austen Appears on the 1574 Visitation. Wagner conjectured that this Robert was father of John Austen I of Horsmonden, based mainly on the use of the same arms by both James and John, and the baptism of an unnamed child of Robert's in the Goudhurst register in 1560. He suggested that this man could be identified with the Robert Austen who died in Horsmonden in 1603.

Wagner states that the heraldic device used by John I Austen suggests descent from the Yalding family. The College of Arms website<sup>54</sup> says that:

The arms of a man pass equally to all his legitimate children, irrespective of their order of birth.

So presumably all of Stephen of Yalding's sons were entitled to use them. I can only see two possible routes to connect John I Austen to the Yalding family, and both are problematical in their own way.

Hypothesis 1

Wagner's pedigree shows Stephen son of Stephen Astyn of Yalding and his wife Margaret as married to Joan Holmud, but fails to add any information about his brother Thomas. The elder brother of these two -William - was definitely born before 1522, so Thomas and Stephen would have been about the right ages to marry in the 1550s and 60s. So far, the theory that Thomas of Wadhurst and his brother Stephen of Mayfield were the sons of Stephen of Yalding holds up. The biggest stumbling block to what seems an open and shut link is the will of Nicholas Austen of Loose cited above which identifies his cousin Stephen as 'of Loose'. Stephen of Loose was lessee of the manor of Loose between 1541 and 1587<sup>55</sup>. Unless this refers to a more distant cousin, the manor lessee would have had to be an absentee if he was the Stephen who married Joan Holmud in Goudhurst in 1560. This is feasible, as the Austens seemed to have property in several parishes, and it is possible that Goudhurst was Joan's parish, but if Stephen held an important role in Loose, why not baptise his children there? For me, the case is still unproven.

Hypothesis 2

This involves inserting an extra generation. It is not easy to assess people's ages from wills. William Astyn of Yalding clearly had grown up children when he wrote his will in 1522. Ten years later, when his son Nicholas wrote his will, his niece - William's granddaughter - Clement Wyllarde was already married. It is just possible, therefore, that William's grandson Stephen was indeed living at Loose, but that his brother Thomas had moved to Goudhurst and wrote a will there in 1559<sup>56</sup> as Thomas Astyn of Goudhurst, clothier. This man named four sons: Thomas, Stephen, William and

George. According to Zell<sup>57</sup>, Goudhurst had 900 'parishioners' in 1557 and only 750 in 1569. From 'all sources' he identifies 14 clothiers in Goudhurst in the 1550s -70s and only 8 in the 1580s - 90s. Common as the name Austen was in the area, it does seem unlikely that there were two, entirely separate, Austen families in Goudhurst engaged in the same occupation.

Children of Thomas Asten named in will:

- 1 Thomas Asten Bequeathed 12<sup>d</sup> - the traditional sum to prevent someone challenging the will. Could this be Thomas Austen of Goudhurst and Wadhurst, already married and having received his share?
- 2 Stephen Asten Bequeathed £10. If this is the Stephen who married Joan Holmud on 25th October 1560, it would look as if he was able to marry once he had received his inheritance.
- 3 William Asten Bequeathed an annuity of 20/-
- 4 George Asten Bequeathed residue of estate, and lands and leases in Goudhurst, from which he is to pay debts and discharge legacies. Named executor. A George Austen married Joan Besbeche at Goudhurst on 8th October 1560 - again, if this is the same man, shortly after receiving his inheritance.

If this Thomas Asten was the father of Thomas Austen of Wadhurst (d. 1601), and the son of Stephen of Yalding, he would have had to have been born by c 1505 at the latest in order to have fathered sons old enough to marry in the 1550s and 60s. This seems to be stretching the dates somewhat, so this hypothesis also remains unproven.

The Descendants of Robert and Elizabeth Austen of Goudhurst and Horsmonden

The family of Robert and Elizabeth Austen, long considered to be that of John I Austen, is included here for completeness. They clearly are not John I's family but there may be kinship links somewhere between the two although John I's family seems to mainly be wealthy clothiers while Robert's family, where occupations can be identified, seem to be humbler weavers.

There is a series of Quarter Session<sup>58</sup> documents beginning in 1599 detailing a quarrel between Austens and Willards in which the name Robert Austen comes up, but the Robert who died in 1603 seems a little old to be involved in assault, so I suspect the entries refer to his children baptised at Horsmonden, and another probable son also named Robert. The documents refer first to an assault in 1599, when Benjamin Austen of Horsmonden, weaver, was to appear and receive and keep the peace towards Joseph Willard. The row didn't go away, for in 1601 Robert Austen weaver of Horsmonden, and Judith and Joan Austen, spinsters – presumably his sisters – were to be brought before the Queen's Bench for perjury in that they swore at the 1600 assize that John Willard, clothier, attacked Elizabeth, the wife of Benjamin Austen at Goudhurst, when he was in fact at Marden<sup>59</sup>. The 1601 entry cites John not Joseph Willard as the other party. Presumably, Judith and Joan were arrested for their perjury, which they would have been if they couldn't pay the £20 fine, because in 1602, Robert Austen weaver of Horsmonden was accused of assaulting John Browne and procuring the women's escape from him<sup>60</sup>. As this Robert's wife is named as Margaret, not Elizabeth, it seems feasible that the man in question is a son of Robert and Elizabeth. Other possibilities present themselves: 1) clerical error – the QS entry should read Elizabeth for Margaret 2) Elizabeth is a very late second marriage, after Margaret's death, 3) Elizabeth's name is wrong in the burial register, 4) There are two, totally unrelated Robert Austens involved in this case, but this seems unlikely. 5) Most likely, - Robert the weaver is a son of Robert and Elizabeth, maybe the unnamed child baptised at Goudhurst in 1560.

Children of Robert Austen Two children baptised at Goudhurst and six baptised or buried at Horsmonden. There is possibly one more son whose baptism has not been found. Wife Elizabeth was buried 24.7.1608 as 'widow of Robert' at Horsmonden. Robert was buried 27.5.1603 at Horsmonden. Other documentary evidence for Robert is confusing. Children of Robert and Elizabeth Austen:

- I. Robert Austen No baptism to corroborate this, unless this is the unnamed child baptised to Robert on 26.4.1560 at Goudhurst. Robert Austen, broad-weaver, and wife Margaret, appear in a series of Quarter Session Records in conjunction with Benjamin Austen and wife Elizabeth, and spinsters Judith and Joan Austen. So it seems like a family group. In 1599, enjoined, with Benjamin, to be of good behavior towards Abraham Willard<sup>61</sup>. Appears again at the Maidstone Session in 1601 accused of false witness with Judith and Joan in a case of trespass and assault by the Willards on Benjamin and Elizabeth. A year later, indicted again<sup>62</sup> for assaulting the man sent to arrest Judith and Joan (presumably for false witness). Always referred to as weaver or broad-weaver.
- II. Stephen Austen baptised 26.1.1561 Goudhurst. Recorded as Stephen Austen son of Robert of Horsmonden. No further record.

- III. Martha Austen baptised 24.3.1565 Horsmonden. Possibly the mother of Prudence Austen, baptised 1599 at Horsmonden
- IV. Judith Austen baptised 20.3.1567 Horsmonden. Involved with her brothers in the Quarter Sessions cases; firstly in 1601 - falsely witnessed that John Willard had attacked Elizabeth Austen at Goudhurst when he was actually at Marden<sup>63</sup>. Presumably arrested for this.
- V. Elizabeth Austen baptised 27.2.1569 Horsmonden
- VI. Benjamin Austen baptised 28.3.1572 Horsmonden. Appears in run of Quarter Session Records in a long feud with the Willard family of Horsmonden. In 1599 John Willard is instructed to keep the peace against him<sup>64</sup> and 10 days later, Benjamin is instructed to keep the peace against him<sup>65</sup>. The trial is one of trespass and assault, and Benjamin's wife, Elizabeth, was the alleged victim; however, Benjamin is also accused of false witness<sup>66</sup>.
The marriage of Benjamin Austen and Elizabeth Bishoppe took place at Horsmonden on 10.10.1596, and three children were born:
1. Salomon baptised 1597 Horsmonden
  2. Mary baptised 1599 Horsmonden
  3. Robert baptised 1600 Horsmonden
- Elizabeth Austen was buried in 1614 at Horsmonden, as the widow of Benjamin.
- VII. Salomen Austen buried 19.3.1575 'son of Robert Austen'. No baptism found, but fits the gap between Benjamin and Joan neatly.
- VII. Joan Austen baptised 1.11.1582 Horsmonden. Involved with her brothers in the dispute recorded in the Quarter Sessions; firstly in 1601 when she falsely witnessed that John Willard had attacked Elizabeth Austen at Goudhurst when he was actually at Marden<sup>67</sup>. Presumably arrested for this.

Miscellaneous Goudhurst Austens

Wills give tantalising glimpses of Austen branches at Goudhurst. Some have been abstracted and appear on the Kent Archaeological website at:

John Austen - 1547 mentions father William Austen, father-in-law John Stephen, wife Margaret, sons William and Richard, three daughters and brother-in-law Alexander Tate. Streatfield<sup>68</sup> implies that the son William is the William Austen of Butts whose daughter married John Horsmonden, (borne out by the will of William Austen - 1616 which names brother Richard, cousin Joan Tate, and, among many others, daughter Margaret Horsmonden). However, he also states that John is the son of Stephen Astyn of Yalding and his wife Margaret, which must be wrong if the will is accurate in giving William as his father's name. Another John Austyne died in Goudhurst in the same year, admon<sup>69</sup> being granted to wife Joan.

William Awsten - 1551 annoyingly names daughters (Ellen, Joan and Elizabeth) but leaves his two sons (minors) unnamed. Names brothers Richard and Thomas. Described as a clothier.

Richard Austen - 1554 Occupation sythesmith. Wife Beatrice, son Thomas

Percival Austyn - 1556 Wills house in Courtesden to son Thomas, house in Staplehurst to James Awsten (another son?), two messuages in Bettriden to son William Awsten, land to daughter Margery Holmes. Witnesses: Wife Agnes Awsten, Richard Awsten and his wife, and others. The year before the will, Percival Austen 'of Staplehurst' took out a bond<sup>70</sup> to Stephen Roberts of Goudhurst. Another bond<sup>71</sup> was taken out in 1587 by a William Austen clothier, who may belong to this family; three years later a fine<sup>72</sup> was levied, and in 1597 a covenant<sup>73</sup> presumably by the same William.

Others which I have abstracted appear on the wills page of my website at:

<http://www.genealogycrank.co.uk/willspage.php>

There was also a John Austen, mercer, who was living at Goudhurst at the time that John Austen I was living in Horsmonden. He appears in the quarter sessions<sup>74</sup> in 1609 as victim of an assault. A reference to the same man in Kinship and other Social- and Economic Links as a Basis for Personal Relationships in the Cranbrook Region of Kent 1660-1700<sup>75</sup> shows him to have had a son Clement, so clearly unconnected.

Courtesden, mentioned above, probably stood in what is now Curtisden Green, a small hamlet north-east of Goudhurst village. According to British History Online Curtisden was a property built by a Scot who built a mansion originally named Rookherst, later changed to Curtisden. This suggests that the name describes a single property rather than a cluster of homes. This adds to the intrigue, as Percival Austen, mentioned above, appears to will this property to his own son Thomas in 1556. Percival doesn't mention a son named Stephen, so the Thomas in question is unlikely to be father to Thomas of Wadhurst. The questions now multiply: did Thomas son of Percival sell the property after inheritance? Was Thomas of Wadhurst a relation trying to get the property back into the family? Is the whole Courtesden issue a red herring? I can answer none of these questions for sure, so have to simply be happy with adding the parents and siblings of John I of Horsmonden to my tree with confidence.

Probate granted to Robert Austen, son, 27.4.1602

Kent Clothiers

One of the factors which helps glue this family together is occupation. In every generation, of Austens in Goudhurst and Horsmonden there are clothiers. There was no formal guild of Kent clothiers, but kinship ties were strong, and marriages were frequently made amongst families with the same occupation and interests. Zell<sup>76</sup> makes the following points:

- 'Clothier dynasties became commonplace in course of the sixteenth century'
- 'Successful clothiers in the reign of Henry VII tended to be succeeded by a male member of the next generation' – sons or nephews
- 'Many clothiers obtained apprenticeships for their sons with friends or relatives who practised the same trade... it is not uncommon to find young men working as journeymen clothiers for their uncles or cousins.'
- 'Naturally, existing ties of kinship and patronage were brought into play...when parents sought a master for their son.'
- 'The social links between the family of the master and that of the apprentice were often mirrored in clothiers' matrimonial ties.... it is clear that intermarriage between the economically successful was commonplace.'
- '...since so many clothiers were related to one another through marriage.'
[clothiers often appear as overseers in other clothiers' wills].

This goes some way to explain why pairs of members one family so often seem to marry spouses who share the same surname.
